Altro Transflor installed on-board the QE2

Altro Transflor's new marine specification flooring Gallium, has been installed on-board the prestigious Queen Elizabeth 2 (QE2). Altro Transflor Gallium was installed as part of a full refurbishment programme for the ship, which is operated by Cunard and boasts 12 guest decks, numerous restaurants, theatres and bars and the only Harrods store at sea.

Altro Transflor Gallium in the shades Bone and Fog, has been installed within the kitchen link corridors that connect the QE2's many restaurants and kitchens. The corridors are in constant use by staff and the flooring, therefore, needs to be able to cope with high volumes of traffic and provide a durable surface that remains slip resistant, even in the event of spillages.

“The corridors have to contend with high volumes of traffic as our waiters move quickly to and from the restaurants with hot food and other items. So it was imperative that the flooring we specified was hard-wearing and safe underfoot. Altro Transflor Gallium was ideal for the job as it offers maximum slip resistance that lasts throughout the life of the floor. Plus, the product also meets all the required safety standards for use on-board ships. To date, we have been delighted with Gallium, which has proved not only extremely durable but also easy to clean and maintain.”
